VALENTINE ABT.

TO WRITE A BURLESQUE.

If you want to write a musical burlesque,
The recipes you never must ignore,
You needn't be amusing or grotesque,
Per contra, you should never fail to bore.
You needn't care a jot for the nature of the plot—
Coherency may run the booking dry—
But you certainly will fail if your idiotic tale
Doesn't introduce a nigger lullaby.

You must make a naughty reference now and then
To the funny little things they do in France,
And, if failing to express it with your pen,
You can illustrate your meaning with a dance,
While no matter what your story, you must mouth about the glory
Of the soldier or the sailor far away.
Like a stripling of a Kipling or like Tommy when he's tippling,
You are bound to write a patriotic lay.

Then you introduce a broker or a Jew,
A soldier must be pitted with a snob,
And the idiotic heroine must woo
In a song that is supposed to make you sob.
If you start act one at home, in the second you must roam
To the continent, to India or Japan.
And of late the dolly ditty is considered rather pretty,
For it's well to be domestic—when you can.

You needn't be particular with rhymes.
"Mamma" and "far" are jingled by the throng,
While "love" and "move"—how many, many times!—
Are coupled in the sentimental song.
A lavish lot of frocks (that display the wearer's clocks)
Must never, never possibly be missed.
While your prospects will be bright if the risky opening night
Sees your "comedy" most vigorously hissed.

—J. M. Barrie in Sketch.

VALENTINE ABT.

The portrait and sketch accompanying it in this month's Gazette is of a musical artist who needs no introduction to the readers of this paper. Valentine Abt stands at the head of living mandolinists and is acknowledged by all to be a wonderful artist on this instrument and a musical genius as well. His performances everywhere have been a revelation to all those fortunate to hear them, and nothing but the warmest praise is heard of his excellent work. His marvelous technique combined with his masterly touch has surprised musicians in all parts of the country.

Mr. Abt is not yet 25 years of age having been born in Allegheny, Pa., in 1873. He received a college education, and it was during his college days that he formed a fondness for the mandolin, and his friends at school, recognizing his abilities as a performer on that instrument, frequently called on him to participate in entertainments of a private nature. At the close of his college course he became connected with one of the largest music houses in Pittsburg, as manager of the small goods department. He kept up his practice and continued to participate from time to time in private entertainments. In 1893 he secured an engagement as a member of the faculty of the Utica school of music, at Utica, N. Y., a position he filled in a most creditable manner. During his stay there he frequently appeared in public and received some very flattering press notices. Returning to Pittsburg he opened a studio and has been located in that city ever since. His favorite instrument is the mandolin, although he is a master of the banjo and guitar as well. While eminently successful as a teacher, it is as a concert soloist that Mr. Abt is best known He has appeared at many concerts in the large cities of the country and always created unbounded enthusiasm. Competent critics unhesitatingly pronounce him the greatest mandolin artist of the century. As a composer Mr. Abt has also demonstrated ability of the highest order, this is shown in his "Valse Brilliante," one of the finest mandolin solos ever written. And yet his career is ahead of him.

POPULARITY OF THE BANJO.

The recent death of William C. Dore, the banjo player, recalls the extraordinary jump into popularity that the banjo made about a dozen years ago. There are people to-day who will not classify a banjo as a musical instrument, but their number is small comparatively. For many years the banjo was associated with the colored people in the South and the negro minstrels in the North, and the average person, who had never enjoyed the delights of twanging one rated it about as high in the musical scale as the tom-tom. The Dore Brothers and several other men who are now known as expert banjo players saw the possibilities of the instrument. Some of them wrote music for it, and here and there could be found a young woman who learned to play the banjo as a pleasant relief from the piano. Four or five of the large colleges added banjo clubs to their glee clubs, and any one who heard the Amherst, the Yale, or the Princton glee and banjo club in concert here last winter can have little doubt as to the popularity of the latter. The banjo became the fashion, and one of our expert players put the finishing touches on its reputation by going to England and winning royal approval. It is an American instrument, however, and it thrives best in this country. Three years ago two Southern girls who had been thrown on their own resources came to New York with their banjos, and within a short time they were as much in demand for musicales as if they had been grand opera singers. Probably the fact that they were pleasing to the eye as well as to the ear may have aided them. The banjo has found its place, and it is not likely to be relegated again to negro minstrelsy.—New York Sun, June 30.

CANADIAN COPYRIGHT.

A despatch has been received by the Canadian Government from the British Ambassador at Washington inclosing a note from the American Secretary of State protesting against the refusal of the Canadian Government to extend Canadian copyright to citizens of the United States.

The American Government pressed upon the British Ambassador the view that as the United States law now extended the benefits of copyright to the residents of Great Britain and Ireland, the Canadian Dominion being a colony of Great Britian should be strongly urged to allow American citizens to take out Canadian copyright on the same terms as Canadians themselves.

The British Ambassador accepted this view and expressed a hope that the Canadian Government might see its way to regard the arrangement between the United States and Great Britain as of the nature of a copyright treaty. The matter is now under the consideration of the Government, who are inclined to offer to the American Government the same status in Canada for American citizens under our copyright law as the copyright law of the United States confers on Canadians.

GLYNN AND DORE.

There is not such a superabundance of genius as reflected in banjo art in these days, that the recent deaths of two distinguished examples of its success in a professional sense—I refer to Mr. Thomas E. Glynn and Mr. William C. Dore—should not be regretted by all lovers of the favorite string instrument of the American people.

Both owed their high positions to popular appreciation of their respective talents, their fame having long ago crossed the Atlantic, and both posseesed traits of character that endeared them to their friends, and commanded the respect of all lovers of music.

I first met Mr. Glynn at a musicale given by Mr. Butter of the New York Clipper, and had the pleasure of accompanying Mr. Glynn in several banjo solos. I can never forget his courtesy to me on the occasion, as demonstrating his manly character. Several years afterwards he played at an Elk's entertainment when I also vibrated the banjo.

I was reciting and playing the banjo at an entertainment of the Catholic Benevolent Legion when I first met Mr. Dore, whose services had also been volunteered. On that evening and ever afterwards I was the recipient of various kind acts that showed his possession of that generous nature that took delight in pleasing his friends.

While there was necessarily a distinction between the playing of these representative

American banjoists, there was none of that rivalry that has its growth in jealousy.

Each showed a love for the banjo, and each had done his share towards increasing its popularity by illustrating distinctive styles upon its strings.

Memory brings each before me as a representative of the fascination that is inseparable from genius in its renditions in the highest artistic sense.

Fame has taken the wealth which was destined for the brow of each and placed it upon the grave of each. The future was brighter in promise to them than was the present. They had not reached the height of their greatest successes when their hands dropped cold from the strings that had so often thrilled with the melodies created by their magic touch.

JESSIE DELANE.

A MARVELLOUS BIRD.

That chorus of the out-of-date song, "Annie Rooney," was sung by a canary in New York for the first time, says the New York Journal. The canary is the property of August Luchow, whose place of business is in Fourteenth St., opposite Irving place. Mr. Luchow bought the bird in Philadelphia for a large sum of money, on the guarantee that it could sing the song literally like a bird, and sing it did.

For days together it had sulked in its cage and resisted every effort to induce it to raise a tuneful lay of any kind, but it finally responded to encouraging sounds made by a young man with his lips. Next he whistled the notes of the song, the canary meanwhile hopping from perch to perch and occasionally spreading its yellow wings as if trying to escape from its pretty wire prison. Suddenly it paused in a corner of the cage and thrust its bill between the bars toward the young man. Once again he whistled the notes, and the bird began to chirp. The next instant it had ascended to a perch, raised its head high in the air and became strangely agitated. Its little body trembled violently and its throat throbbed perceptibly. Then it began to sing ever so sweetly, and the familiar air of "She's my Sweetheart" rolled melodiously from its amber beak. Every note rendered was clear and distinct, and the bird, after more coaxing, repeated its effort, much to the delight of its group of auditors. Then it gazed knowingly but sedately at the upturned faces, hopped to another perch and settled down for a nap.

The methods employed in training were exceedingly simple, although to the layman they may be mysterious and apparently impossible, when the bird was very young—in fact, almost a fledging—it was placed in a cage in a dark room, alone. Then the cage was enclosed in a cloth. At frequent intervals the trainer would quietly enter the apartment with a small musical instrument of the organette type. This was operated with a crank, and when the crank was turned by the trainer it would give forth just one tune, and that was "Annie Rooney." It was slow work, though, the little thing, not being a mimic bird, finding much difficulty in chirping the first notes. After that it was easy, and the song, in part at least, was finally mastered by the wonder in yellow feathers.

Mr. Luchow has heard that a barber who formerly lived in West Fifteenth street, by using similar tactics, taught a bird to sing "Home, Sweet Home," but he never saw the bird, and the barber, who is said to have been offered $1,000 for the marvel, has moved away.

But the bird that sings "Annie Rooney" is still in the city, and can be seen and heard at any reasonable hour in its cage, which is almost within the shadow of Tammany Hall.

HIGHLY FLATTERING COMMENTS.

Much of fashionable Neapolitan society came to Silvestri's salon Saturday evening to meet the famous mandolinist's American pupil Miss H. Mabel Mann. The young signorina's playing pleased the guests very much and they greatly admired her playing of some American songs. The great pianist Comm. Luciano Piccinini accompanied Miss Mann and Comm. Silvestri; the Baronessa di Lorenzo executed on the piano very well, and Count Mentozzi sang. Francesco Cunmino, the poet, who is a great favorite in Neapolitan and Parisienne society, sang some of his own compositions with much feeling.

Wednesday night the American Signorina H. Mabel Mann who is staying at Pension Monaco with her companion Fraulein Leitner gave a dinner party for Comm Silvestri, Signora Silvestri, Comm. Piccinini and Poet Cunmino.

Thursday evening Miss Mann was the guest of honor at the big Feast given by the Barona and Baronessa di Lorenzo at their handsome home.

Friday evening Comm. Silvestri and Poet Cunmino gave a dinner for Miss Mann at the famous café at Posilipo. Beautiful mandolin and guitar music was furnished by an orchestra who played several compositions of Silvestri and sang some of the popular songs of Cunmino.

THE ALUMINUM MANDOLIN.

The only all aluminum mandolin, made by the Hutchins Manufacturing Co., of Springfield, Mass., is making steady progress in the esteem of all who can appreciate an instrument of unusal merit whether musical or mechanical.

Although it has been on the market less than six months, the superior qualities of the aluminum mandolin are being widely recognized by dealers, who find it a good seller, and by celebrated artists whose special training and cultivated tastes fit them as capable critics of what a first class mandolin should be.

The aluminum mandolin is not in any sense of the word "cheap." It cost time and money to make an instrument of enduring merit. Careful supervision is exercised in the mauufacture of these products. Not alone are the shapes worked out with that degree of care which an artist devotes to a work of art, but its construction is based on scientific calculations, so as to bring out to the fullest extent the especial tonal quality.

C. W. Hutchins, the efficient manager, aided by a competent staff of workmen, each and all of whom are experts in their special branches, are devoting keen judgment and undoubted skill to the production of these mandolins, which bear successfully the scrutiny of the most critical, whether judged from the standpoints of tone or construction

The aluminum mandolin is an instrument which dealers will find popular at all seasons of the year. It is not subject to atmospheric influences; it will not warp, crack or split, and is particularly adapted for all climates. There is no tarnishing or changing of color. Whether at the seaside, the mountain, or home, the alumninum mandolin affords the utmost satisfaction.

A number of special or individual features are embodied in the aluminum mandolin, which are covered by patents. One especially which is of great value to the ordinary player is the finger board, which is mathematically accurate, so that the mandolin can be tuned correctly without any effort. Limited space prevents us from treating of the many excellent points embodied in the aluminum mandolin and which entitle it to the special consideration of the trade.

We would advise dealers to look up these instruments. They will find them well worthy of support. It only needs intelligent pushing to create a good market for the only all aluminum mandolin in their respective sections.

AUGUST, 1897.

EDITORIAL.

Our readers will find a highly interesting letter in our "Correspondence" column from the pen of Miss H. Mabel Mann, the talented performer on the mandolin, who is now in Naples. Her reception there is vividly shown in the extracts from a leading Neapolitan paper, which we print in this issue under the head of "Highly Flattering Comments."

A touching tribute to those two great banjoists, Glynn and Dore, from Miss Jesse Delane of New York, is published in this month's Gazette, and it will be appreciated by those members of the profession who knew intimately these two banjo kings.

This number completes the tenth year of the existence of the Gazette. When it started its career, there was but one other banjo journal printed, not a thousand miles from Philadelphia. Our contemporary then and after predicted the Boston banjo paper would be short lived, but it soon gave that up and has since resignedly conceded it as having come to stay. During the latter part of the decade several papers have risen in the banjo, mandolin and guitar world, and very creditable ones to the profession. There is room for all.

The new departure of the L. B. Gatcomb Co. in reducing the price of the Gazette from one dollar to fifty cents, while still keeping to its standard of giving the banjo, mandolin and guitar news, has been favorably received all around as the large increase in subscriptions shows. It is well worth the subscription price.

The special session of Congress has at last adjourned, after passing the tariff bill. One item is a duty of forty-five per cent on strings, which have for years been admitted free, and they thus have consequently gone up in price in that proportion. Still we can't have it all our own way and we believe that with something fixed as a policy to rely upon that we shall see some business before long as a result.

CONCERTS.

The Gazette acknowledges with thanks the receipt of a program illustrated with the picture of the principals of the recent concert at Manchester, Eng., of the pupils of Mr. and Mrs. James Lee, the well-known banjo, mandolin and guitar specialists of that city. Able talent also assisted. The Lee Amateur Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Band, composed of more than 100 instruments, including banjos, mandolins, guitars, mandolas, lute and drums, under the direction of Mr. Lee, was a very taking feature. All are or have been pupils of Mr. and Mrs. Lee and their ensemble playing was very fine. We also beg leave to acknowledge the receipt of a handsome illustrated catalogue from these artists. Their studios are 37a and 41 Oxford st., Manchester, and 10 Warren st., Stockport.

A select coterie of musical people assembled at the home of Prof. G. E. Gebest, on South Fourth st., to listen to a guitar recital given by Johnson Bane, the guitar soloist, who is stopping in the city for a few days. Mr. Bane entertained his critical audience in a manner that struck those of the assembly with both wonder and admiration. As an instrumentalist he is nothing short of a marvel. His execution is no more to be compared with that of the ordinary guitar player than Remenyi's work on the violin is to be compared with that of a back-country fiddler. Among the selections rendered were Chopin's second Nocturne, Mozskowski's Spanish dance No. 2, and other compositions of like character and standard.

Mr. Bane is also a composer of wonderful ability. Many of the selections played that evening were his own compositions. In all of them there was brilliancy of conception and when produced with his faultless style and execution suggested genius of a high order. In his hands the guitar becomes a solo instrument of wonderful power ane sweetnes.

Zanesville, O., Times Recorder, July 26.

We are in receipt just before going to press of a choice concert program for July 18, given at the well known Canadian summer resort, the Robeval, Lake St. John, P Q., from Prof. Wm. Sullivan. Prof Sullivan has been in charge of the music at this hotel for several seasons now, and the program sent us shows that he gives his audiences the latest and best. He has with him this season one of Montreal's best pianists, Mr. N. Eichorn. This program made a big hit and Mr. Sullivan writes that the banjo came in for a large share of the applause.

Mr. D. Acker of Wilkesbarre, Pa., writes that he has had a splendid season, but that while he is teaching some yet since the beginning of warm weather he is not very busy. He anticipates good business next season.

PUTTING ON A BANJO HEAD.

The brackets are on the table
And the tailpiece on the floor;
If you're not blind the hoop you'll find
Hanging on the parlor door.
The wrench is on the kitchen stove
Where it's slowly turning red;
Wife is sighing, children crying,
Papa's putting on a head.

The hired girl has gone up town
Getting out of Papa's way;
Cat is growling, dog is howling,
Sure the d——l is to pay.
Now it's getting down in place,
Bang! head's broken, what he said
"- - ! - ! - - - - ! ! - ! - - ! - - ! !"
Papa's putting on a head.

Next you see him going downstreet
Banjo tucked under his arm
Home a riot, now is quiet,
Family all o'er their alarm.
Into a music store he goes,
To the clerk, "I've been misled,
I've tried a lot, but I could not,
So you can put on a head."

L. H. Galeucia is at North Derby, Vt.

Mr. Joseph Donovan is playing the summer gardens.

Master Conrad Goodrich will be one of the debutants next season.

Miss Rose Fritz of Syracuse called in July. She reports business very good in that city.

Valentine Abt, the great mandolinist, will make a starring tour of the country next season.

Wm. Horan, the young "wonder" banjoist, will be on the concert stage the coming season.

The Ideals will have a program the coming season far in advance of any ever attempted by a banjo club.

Mr. G. L. Lansing expects to spend the time from July 20th until Sept. 1st in Bluehill, Me., together with his family.

Mr. A. C. Robinson of the Ideals has been giving lessons of late in Cottage City and New Bedford, where he has several pupils.

Charley Phair, the well-known banjoist of Presque Isle, was in town recently looking for another piece of good horse-flesh. Mr. Phair is quite a horseman and already has one or more good steppers.

We are indebted to Mr. Thomas H. West of Kansas City, for a proof copy of his popular waltz song, "On the Wedding Morn." It was played by the Washington

Guitar and Mandolin Club at President McKinley's inauguration ball, where it made a hit, as it has wherever it has been played. Its author is a Bostonian by birth. It was on the banjo that its composer picked it out for this song.

Mrs. M. Rogers of Cleveland, Ohio, and Mrs. M. M. Cobb of South Royalston, with whom the former is stopping, were in the Gazette office a few days since. Mrs. Cobb, it is rumored, contemplates removing to New York state.

It is said that Mr. W. P. Hovey, the popular and efficient banjoist of Lawrence, contemplates going into the insurance business shortly It would be a distinct loss to the musical profession if he should do so.

The L. B. Gatcomb Co. is having a great demand for Thomas E Glynn's last composition, "Nigger in a Fit." It is a very taking piece and sure to have a great run.

Miss H. N. Cooley of the Highlands has quite a class of pupils this summer at Magnolia.

Mr. F. T. McGrath, who has been located in Savannah, Ga., teaching the banjo, mandolin and guitar, was a visitor last week at the Gazette office. Mr. McGrath reports the banjo as a coming instrument in the South in which the best people are developing a great interest. Mr. McGrath has had a very successful season himself.

Mr. W. H. Teasdale is another banjo, mandolin and guitar teacher in Savannah, who has been doing a good business. He is very popular in musical circles.

It is currently reported that Mr. J. A. LaBarge, who has been teaching the banjo for some time in Nashville, Tenn., will shortly remove to Louisville, Ky. Mr. LaBarge was formerly located in Boston.

Miss H. N. Cooley of Boston Highlands recently gave a musicale at home, in which the Hyland Mandolin and Guitar Club composed of her pupils assisted. The affair was a very pleasant one, the club giving a fine exhibition and one very creditable to its teacher. A feature was a piano solo by one of Miss Cooley's pupils on the piano, Miss Ethel Simpson, who promises remarkable proficiency in that direction.

Mr. H. Y. Leavitt, the well-known banjo writer under the name of "Scolopax," sends us a copy of his late song "Bye, Bye, Belinda," which has been sung with great success by Josephine Sabel at Hammersteins as well as in Frisco and the West. She will open with it Aug 1 at Masonic Temple, Chicago, and later in England. It is a very taking song and has been highly complimented by leading papers.

We extend our sincere sympathies to Mr. F. H Whetsel, the well-known banjo artist, of St. John, in the loss of his baby girl on June 27.

Mr. L. B. Gatcomb and Mrs. Gatcomb spent a few days the last of July on Casco Bay, Mr. Gatcomb then returning to Boston and his wife going to her old home, Limerick, Me., for a few weeks.

"Joe" Donovan, the brilliant young banjoist, played a very successful engagement recently at Lincoln Park, New Bedford.

The Euterpe Banjo, Mandolin and Harp Club are just finishing a two weeks engagement at the Pavilion Theatre, Block Island.

Subscribers and readers of the Gazette are invited to contribute to this column any thing they think will be of interest to its readers. Let us hear from you.

A. A. Babb is taking it easy up in Maine but "Babb's Practical Guitar Instructor," still has the call here in Boston. It is certainly a very valuable work, especially for teachers.

And the "Grover Bridge" still sells fast. "Will not tip nor slip." See "ad" on page 14.

Look out for the red wrapper on your Gazette. It means your subscription has expired and needs to be renewed at once. Delays are dangerous.

One of E. M. Hall's banjo books with its great collection of jig melodies is well worth its price, one dollar. Published by the L. B. Gatcomb Co.

Miss Maude A. Emerson, the well-known manager of the Amberside, Trio is also a busy and successful teacher of banjo, mandolin and piano. She has had a good business during the past season.

Miss Jessie Delane, the talented banjo, mandolin and guitar teacher, of New York, is now resting from her arduous labors of the past year. Miss Delane is a worker in her profession.

Miss H. Mabel Mann of Randolph, who is in Naples, was recently entertained by the Prince and Princess d'Alvo at their home in Posillipo. The princess is the "prima donna d'honore" to the Queen Margherita, and her mother, Marchesa Villamarena, is the queen's special companion.

It was a foregone conclusion that E. M. Hall would be making a big hit as is the case, on the New England circuit with Gorman's Minstrels. He is a great drawing card.

Mays and Hunter were the star artists at Will C. Pepper's great banjo concert in London, Friday evening Apr. 9, in Steinway Hall.

Harry Brooks, the popular banjoist, opens the season at Schenectady, N. Y., Aug. 19, with the "Fire Patrol Co." He will do the leading comedy part as also banjo specialty. The company is booked for a season of forty-five weeks. Mr. Brooks travelled with the same company last season.

Mr. Vess L. Ossman was the recipient of a handsomely printed and highly complimentary letter of thanks from St. Cecile Lodge of Masons of New York for his services at the Lodge entertainment last spring in Chickering Hall.

Mr. A. K. Cummings the well-known banjo and guitar teacher of Athol, writes; "The Gazette is gaining friends fast here, we can't do without it." This is but a sample.

We call the attention of readers to the "ad" on the fifteenth page of the Gazette of our enterprizing contemporary, Mr. D. Acker of Wilkesbarre, Pa. He has a strong list of publications.

Mr. Fred O. Goldthwaite of Biddeford, Me. is doing a good musical business in the banjo line.

Mr. Joseph Donovan, the bright young banjo player, was a feature at Crystal Lake Park, Gardner, the week of July 5th, and at Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, week of July 12th.

L. B. Gatcomb Co., Boston, Mass., have issued "Slumber Song," by Walter I. Dolbeare, for two mandolins and guitar; "The University Grand Waltz Brilliant," by Thomas E. Glynn, for banjo; and "The Shepherd Boy," by G. D. Wilson, for guitar. The arrangements have been made in such a manner as to make the above pieces most effective for those instruments.

Alfred A. Farland leaves New York in September for an extended Western and Southern concert and recital trip, which will cover several months, taking him as far West as California, and as far South as Tennessee.

The Elias Howe Co. are getting ready a number of advertising novelties to further spread the sales of their Howe-Orme guitars and mandolins, the demand for which has put enough orders into the factory to keep it busy for two months.

The Mandolin and Guitar Orchestra which was formed by Mr. J. M. Priaulx, of the Oliver Ditson Co., gave a most successful concert in the Music Hall, Grand Central Palace, under the patronage of the Music Teachers' National Convention, last week. The orchestra consisted of thirty-five people, every one of whom was an expert solo artist. and led by Charles D'Janon. One of the features of this concert was the reading of an essay on the history of the development of the guitar by Mr. J. Kitchner, also an essay on the mandolin by Chevalier Enricho Garguilo, which was highly interesting.

MUSICAL WORLD.

Paderewski, it is said, can play from memory over 500 compositions. He needs to read or play a composition new to him only twice in order to memorize it, and frequently after reading it over could play it without referring to the notes.

The court martial which recently tried Professor Fanciulli, leader of the Marine Band, on charges growing out of his refusal to play one of Sousa's marches ordered to be played on Decoration Day by Lieutenant Draper of the Marine Corps, has found him guilty of disobedience of orders and has recommended his dismissal from the service. Fanciulli was Sousa's successor as leader of the Marine Band.

A writer in the Springfield (Mass.) Union says: "I know a young man who, in cleaning his wheel a day or two ago, struck one of the spokes in such a way that it emitted a clear tone; and on a little investigation he was able to find six spokes that furnished as many notes of an octave. The other two notes were missing, but might have been easily secured by tightening or loosening other spokes. As it was, he was able to play a few simple airs.

We think that if the correct statistics were taken it would be found that New York is the musical centre of the United States, with Boston second, and Chicago and Philadelphia following closely as third.—The Metronome.

BURLINGTON, VT., July 8, 1897.

L. B. GATCOMB CO.:

Dear Sirs:—Business has been good with me the past season, had all the teaching I could do evenings besides playing lots of engagements.

I have formed a trio which does splendid work; we have done considerable concert work the past season, it is termed the "Oisean Trio" 2 banjos and piano or guitar; more about it in the future.

W. G. HANSON.

LONDON, June 17, 1897.

DEAR MR. GATCOMB:

I have taken Signor Francia, the noted musician, as a partner, he has for the last six months been studying my system of playing the banjo. He is the finest mandolinist I have ever heard. He was for 12 years mandolinist to the Queen of Italy and is considered by the press and public to be the greatest mandolinist in Europe. We appear next Wednesday, the 23rd June, before the Queen and the Prince of Wales and several of the Royal Family, at the Royal Botanic Society.

I have just returned from a tour in the provinces. My partner and I will have all the business we can attend to in London. My wife joins me with kindest regards and best wishes to you and yours.

Your true friend,
CLARK H. JONES.

SAVANNAH, GA., July 1st 1897.

DEAR GATCOMB:

Am just about closing up my business here, prior to leaving for Boston where I intend to put in most of the summer.

Have had a very good season and am pleased to say the hard times has not affected my business in the least, and I anticipate even better results for next season.

The mandolin is the favorite instrument in this locality at present and is increasing in popularity every day.

During my experience in the South for the past two seasons I have come to the conclusion that the prevalent idea among a great many that the banjo is a negro instrument is a mistake as I have seen very few banjos among the colored population. On the other hand the guitar seems to be their favorite instrument.

They are mostly ear players and use wire strings.

This seems to be a good field for the banjo, although its possibilities are not as generally known here as one might imagine, players on this instrument being rather scarce.

With best wishes,
I am yours sincerely,
F. T. MCGRATH.

NAPLES, ITALY, June 26, 1897.

DEAR MR. GATCOMB:

I have been thinking every day that I would write and thank you for the two copies of the "Gatcomb's Monthly" which I have just received. I trust that you will pardon me for neglecting to do so.

I wish I could begin to tell you of the beauties of "sunny" Italy but I know I have not the power. I have always heard that Naples was a specially beautiful spot but I find it is even lovelier than I expected.

I like the Neapolitan people very much and have been the recipient of much social attention from the people of the highest society here.

I cannot tell you how I have enjoyed my lessons with Silvestri. I have learned forty-two new solos so I think by the time I return to Boston I will have quite an extensive "repertoire."

I hear nothing but words of praise and admiration for Silvestri both as a man and as a musician. He is all that constitutes a perfect gentleman, and as a mandolinist I find that he is recognized as first in the world both as a soloist and a composer. He is writing a solo for me now and when finished he is to dedicate it to me. I hope sometime I will have a chance to play it to you. I have almost finished my lessons much to my regret.

When I leave Naples I shall visit Rome, Florence, Venice and Milan, then go into Switzerland stopping at Lucerne, Interlachen and Berne, from there to Paris and London then through Belguim into Holland. I expect to sail from Rotterdam for New York the last of August so will be in Boston in September.

Again thanking you for the papers and with kind regards to yourself and "The Ideals,"

I am most sincerely,
H. MABEL MANN.

METHOD FOR THE MANDOLIN,

By GEORGE BARKER.

Especially arranged for the use of American students, Contains many pieces particularly adapted for the Mandolin.

Price - - - - $1.00

Barker's Mandolin Method will be found to be the easiest and most comprehensive of all Mandolin Methods, being revised and edited by one of the most careful and painstaking writers that can be found. For beginners and teachers this method has no equal.

HENRI ERNST,

To which is added now, $4.00 worth, of selected Music, consisting of

MANDOLIN SOLOS,
MANDOLIN DUETTS,
MANDOLIN and GUITAR,
MANDOLIN and PIANO.

Grover's PROGRESSIVE AND ILLUSTRATED

Method for the Mandolin.

Edited and Compiled by A. D. GROVER.

Soloist of the Boston Ideal Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club.

PRICE, ONE DOLLAR.

As the Mandolin became popular, we found that a comprehensive, interesting method was sorely needed, and after consulting the best authorities, we concluded that Mr. A. D. Grover was the most competent person to edit and compile such a work for publication. This method carefully treats the following important points viz: Proper position of the body when holding the Mandolin; position of the right hand and wrist; use of the plectrum; different strokes of the plectrum; exercises for intellegent practice for the left hand; the half position, an important factor in Mandolin playing, rarely if ever having been treated in a Mandolin method of American edition; the scales in different positions; staccato and legato movement; exercises in repeated notes; and much other valuable instruction necessary to the pupil and interesting for the teacher.

It has been our aim in publishing this method to give the public and our customers something that should be considered authentic. Mr. Grover's reputation as a Mandolin teacher, soloist and writer, is so well established that we feel sure that his name is a sufficient guarantee of the worth of this method. Sent by mail post paid on receipt of price.
